The worlds of Elder Scrolls and Dungeons and Dragons are inextricably entwined. Dungeons and Dragons has had a far reaching impact on the themes, concepts, and lore of the Elder Scrolls, with both games sharing a history and influence from the same body of work. The Elder Scrolls series is one of the most popular role-playing series in history and it would be impossible for Bethesda to create The Elder Scrolls series without Dungeons and Dragons serving as a powerful, yet subtle influence on their creativity. While the Elder Scrolls series is most closely associated with fantasy, the worlds of Elder Scrolls and Dungeons and Dragons are many times, in fact, science fiction (Elder Scrolls, for example, is set a vast number of years after the events of the Star Wars saga). What is certain, however, is that the Elder Scrolls series world has a rich depth that has influenced the many games that have been based on them. The Elder Scrolls Online is a newly created game set within the world of the Elder Scrolls series. It is an online role-playing game that is developed by ZeniMax Online Studios and published by Bethesda Game Studios. Players can freely roam throughout Cyrodiil with other characters in the same party, with the aim of gaining honor and experience from fighting the numerous monsters and other NPCs that are inhabiting the land. As the first Elder Scrolls game, The Elder

Scrolls Online aims to provide players with an online experience that is rich in depth, rich in content, and worthy of the Elder Scrolls franchise. The Elder Scrolls Online is also set to launch in the first quarter of 2014 for Microsoft Windows. It will be available on Mac OS X for select regions in the fall of 2014. The Elder Scrolls Online is available for pre-purchase via the Windows Store, Steam, Amazon.com, and selected online retailers. Special thanks to Sereko. Featherweight contender Andre “Iron” Gutierrez is looking to get in the mix and “face the devil” in Kelvin Gastelum on May 11. Gutierrez recently broke out of camp to try and make his UFC debut against Weili Zhang in Brazil.

The UFC has yet to issue an official bout agreement for the bout which could have Gutierrez fending off the unbeaten Strikeforce champion. “He is a real man. I have to deal with this guy that has the biggest trash-talk in the UFC,” Gutierrez recently told the Sherdog Radio Network’s “Beatdown” show. “He is a man. I have to step it up. He is the devil in the UFC.” Gutierrez might have an uphill battle in making his debut because Zhang has only fought twice inside of the Octagon with his most recent win being a submission victory over former WSOF champion Justin Gaethje. Zhang also recently overcame a knee injury to get back in the cage. The 24-year-old Pulauu, Puerto Rico native, however, is moving forward with the intention to prove he is the dominant featherweight in the featherweight division. “I’m not scared of anybody. I want to get in the Octagon and fight and prove to everyone that I am the dominant featherweight,” Gutierrez told Sherdog. The 23-year-old McGregor, Ireland native was scheduled to meet lightweight Nate Diaz last year at UFC 202 but a fractured foot kept McGregor out of the cage and put pressure on the UFC to push back Diaz’s fight against McGregor at UFC 200.
